

Call for Papers - Extended

Special Fall Issue: Disinformation in the 2020 US Elections

Submission guidelines

Special Fall Issue: To be published September 30th (tentative)

New Submission Deadline: August 22nd, 2020

Guest-Editors

- Ann Crigler, Professor of Political Science and Policy, Planning and Development, USC
- Marion Just, William R. Kenan, Jr. Professor of Political Science, Wellesley College

All papers will be widely distributed to a variety of stakeholders, including politicians, journalists, and researchers.

For more information: mjust@wellesley.edu, acrigler@usc.edu

Topics of particular interest include, but are not limited to:

- Disinformation originating from domestic official sources
- Disinformation and partisan polarization
- International state-sponsored disinformation campaigns
- The role of traditional media (TV, radio, newspapers, etc.) in interaction with online disinformation (amplification, etc.)
- Disinformation and Elections-relevant wedge issues
- Detection of online communities that spread, or are targeted by, SNS disinformation campaigns
- Effects of disinformation on journalists' norms and practices in covering the election
- Behavioral effects of disinformation

We invite concise, empirical papers from all disciplines and methodologies, including case studies, experimental research, qualitative/ethnographic research, data and network sciences. We are particularly interested in papers employing mixed-methodologies.

All papers should be submitted to the Guest Editors, Ann Crigler and Marion Just. Please also CC the HKS Misinformation Review editorial desk at misinforeview@hks.harvard.edu in your submission.